

Investigation Summary Report

Village Salon Grand Cane, LA

HISTORY

Part of a small strip of historic buildings, located in the heart of the small town of Grand Cane, the Village Salon began its tenure as a general store. Built in the late 1800's, the building later housed a barber shop and a make-shift court house, where minor fines were paid.

ACTIVITY

According to employees of the salon, activity seems to occur quite regularly. Based on their claims, the activity seems to take on poltergeist characteristics, having items move and electronic devices turn on and off. Amy, the owner, reports seeing the lid on the clothes hampers flip back and forth and has heard the radio turn on and off. Amy says she has never felt threatened by the activity and has even comically named the presence she feels "Brenda".

INVESTIGATION

We arrived at the salon and quickly meet with Amy, who was very kind and hospitable. We quickly did a walk through and set up our cameras. I guess now that we have done this so long, we are in a groove, because we have setting up down to an art, getting done in under 20 minutes. We did our initial walk through, getting temperature and EMF base readings. From one power outlet, I found the highest levels of EMFs I have ever seen from interior wiring, spiking well past an unbelievable 300MG, which cannot be healthy. Other than that, a pretty constant reading of 1.0MG was detected, which is still higher than most areas. After chasing away a couple unwanted "spectators", we went "lights out".

We began conducting our standard routine by doing some EVP work and getting a "feel" for the place. Myself, Shelly, Vikki, and Amy were all sitting down completely still, when we heard something that sounded just like a marble or a small plastic object bounce on the ground. The noise came from between Vikki and I, which was nothing but empty floor. We turned on all the lights and could not find anything on the floor that could have made that noise. Could it have been "Brenda" making her presence known!? No other first hand experiences were had the rest of the night. Now came the task of analyzing the evidence!

Several interesting sound clips were found. One being the time when we heard the object bounce on the ground and the other, possibly one of the clearer EVPs we have heard. While Regina and Amy were talking, we picked up an extremely clear female voice saying, "I'm not crazy." Only Regina, Amy, and Korrin were in the building. Korrin was not speaking and the voice does not match with Regina's or Amy's. The whisper sounds much closer than the two, plus they were speaking at a normal volume level. I am still posting the clip for you to hear but am hesitant to label it as a true "EVP", just because there is some possibility it could have been Amy, but I seriously doubt it. Again, if this is a legitimate one, this is on of our best EVPs captured. The last one is when Todd and I were speaking and you hear a fairly clear male voice saying what sounds like, "You'll pay!" You be the judge! Finally, Ive added a very interesting video clip of a possible light anomaly. It is definitely not dust and just doesn't seem like the movement of an insect. It almost looks like a laser pointer, but no one was using anything like that. The flight pattern is very unique.

In closing, is the Village Salon "haunted"? You be the judge. Scientifically, we do not have the concrete evidence to label it "haunted", yet we all know we heard something fall from somewhere that we cannot explain. As I've said before, unfortunately we cannot base our conclusions on personal experiences, yet they still make for great stories! Again, we would like to thank Amy for having us and we would love to make a return visit.
