HISTORY

This investigation started with Mrs. Adkins contacting us by saying she had activity in her home. Oddly enough, she claimed pennies would show up out of nowhere, a painting would fly off the kitchen wall, footsteps could be heard through the night when nobody was out of bed, and even witnessed doors opening on their own. The twist is that the home was previously two different houses built into one, and there was different activity occurring in each side of the home. The residents claimed to be at their wits end, wanting to leave the house if things did not change. So we set out to help in any way we could.

The history of this house (or should I say homes) was very interesting. The previous owner had two separate homes moved from different locations to this one property. He then connected the two homes together with a large living area. This sounded very strange to me to build a house comprised of two old houses that had to be relocated. One of my investigators went to the local library and courthouse to try and find some records, but sadly we couldn't find any records of the houses being moved. We were told that he paid a large amount of money to get the homes moved, and then an even larger amount of money remodeling to fit them together. He sold the Adkins the house rather quickly and then disappeared, and they were not able to get in contact with him, so there was a great deal of mystery that came with this home.

We wanted a small investigation, very private and personal. We decided it would be Todd the case manager for North Louisiana, and two investigators Vikki and Regina. We had visited the home previously, so once we got there the investigation started rather quickly. We went lights out and the three of us, including Mrs. Adkins went to work. We started by doing some EVP work in one of the bedrooms, shortly after that we invited Mrs. Adkins in to help us. Since some of the activity had been happening before they moved into the house I felt that Mrs. Adkins possibly had a spirit attached to her and could help with the investigation. As the night progressed we split up and I sat in a bedroom on the other side of the home, as I sat there asking questions, I asked for a sign of presence and right after I felt a hard poke on my left leg. I didn't move and turned the flashlight on, but nothing was there that could have poked me. Later that night we all gathered in the living room, which was the only place in the house without activity. Remember the living room was built fresh to connect the two houses. We were all accounted for, and started a group EVP session. We asked for a sign and we heard loud racket and walking coming from the bedroom down the hall, definitely got us excited. Later that night we decided to break down and turn all the lights back on. Unfortunately we didn't catch anything on audio or video. But we all had our own experiences that night.

Ready for a second investigation, I contacted Mrs. Adkins and asked how things were going. She answered by telling me the activity had stopped. I was happy for her, but disappointed that we couldn't have another investigation....LOL. The picture that had flown off the wall did the same a second time, this time landing on the stove about 6 feet from the wall. She disposed of the painting and since then haven't experience anything out of the ordinary. We want to thank Mr. And Mrs. Adkins for the opportunity to come in and investigate, and we home all is well at your awesome home!!
