

Investigation Summary Report

Holloway Cemetery Deville, LA

HISTORY

Located on the backroads of Deville, Louisiana, the Holloway Cemetery is one of the oldest, if not the oldest, cemetery in the surrounding area, having graves marked as old as the 1820's. The cemetery is quite large, yet the graves are spread out scarcely. The grounds are said to have contained a missionary and the site of several hangings from the massive oak trees present, yet no verifiable documentation has been found of these incidents.

Sudden temperature changes and EMF spikes have been experienced here. The property can be visited at any time, yet the road, and cemetery, is located behind a private residence so it is best to visit the area in one vehicle and not cause any commotion.
