

Investigation Summary Report

Private Residence

Homer, LA

HISTORY

What people say about small town America is true. These towns are a great place to visit and full of extremely nice people. Our next investigation took us to a private residence in the little town of Homer, Louisiana. The home is a classic style two story house located in the heart of Homer. We were contacted by Jackie who was not scared of what was going on in her home, just curious as to what might be happening. We were told they felt the spirits were not harmful in any way, but actually a bit helpful and even playful at times. Only one encounter had been negative in nature. The home had been previously owned by a doctor who built his operating room in the back yard which still stands to this day. Patients had been known to stay in the home if they were too ill to be transported. This quaint house had a bit of history, so we were eager to investigate.

Activity reported ranged from items being moved or misplaced, to an apparition being seen crossing the hall. Doors upstairs had opened on their own, and footsteps could be heard through the night going up the stairs and pacing the second floor. The most recent paranormal experience was when a young woman had been pushed down the stairs and then caught, both by entities which could not be seen.

The investigation consisted of 5 investigators and the two owners of the house. We ran 4 cameras on the DVR, and walked with miniDV cameras, EMF meters, voice recorders, and cameras. The house seemed quiet at first but as the night progressed a few experiences had been reported by the investigators. The second floor, which had attic space on both sides of the main room, was the main area of interest through the night. EMF spikes were very common in this attic space. After confirming that there was no power to the attic area we investigated further. High EMF readings were found moving throughout the attic space. One minute the high reading would be in one place then shortly would be found a few feet in another direction. One investigator heard a distinct mans laugh come from right behind him, the laugh came right after the question “are you the one who pushes people down the stairs” was asked. The downstairs room where the mother-in-law had been seen speaking to unknown individuals had a heavy feeling at times. One investigator wished to not spend time in that certain room.

Everything went smooth and we had no hiccups. After reviewing the DVR and listening to hours of audio we were left with only one photo. The photo shows a mist in the attic area where the unexplainable EMF spike had been witnessed. Below you can see the photo as well as an excellent example of matrixing due to a dirty mirror. Check them out below.

We had a few experiences and even a little bit of unexplainable evidence. We want to thank the owners of the house, and wish them well. As a matter of fact, the home is for sale. If you feel like owning a haunted home in Homer Louisiana then maybe this historic house would be right up your alley!!
